

Relocation to Cambridge

Jeremy Tankard Typography has moved to the historic university town of Cambridge. Famous not only for its university, but also for the Cambridge University Press. It is the oldest printer and publisher in the world, having operated continuously since 1584. The press holds a special place in typographic history thanks to its strong links with Stanley Morison and the Monotype Revivals programme of the early 20th century. Needless to say when not designing type, lazy days will be enjoyed punting on the river Cam or relaxing in The Orchard Tea Garden.

University of Oxford

Staying with the historic university towns. Jeremy Tankard was commissioned by Emceevee Ltd to draw the word OXFORD for use in the University of Oxford's recent identity change.

TypeBookTwo

Keep an eye out for TypeBookTwo. The design is nearing completion and will be going to press soon. Stocks of TypeBookOne are running low but copies are still available to buy. The PDF order form can be downloaded at www.typography.net/info/TypeBookOne_order.pdf.

The Shire Types

The character sets have been expanded to allow the setting of most European languages. Also arrows and additional symbols have been added. Now more languages can be immersed in the English shires. Information on The Shire Types can be found at www.typography.net/type/shires.htm.
