About

Queezoid is single case invented script that is read left to right. It uses a variety of symbols to visually change the expected look of our own text. Coding within the fonts is used to add texture through the use of special tied characters, a tone mark appearing above or below a second vowel, and a high or low mark denoting a double letter combination. Queezoid Sans replicates a formal printing type and Queezoid Hand includes multiple joined characters derived from writing.

The family

Queezoid comprises of 2 fonts.

Hand

Sans

Features

To allow Queezoid to function as intended, please make sure that Ligatures and Contextual Alternates are turned on.

Language support

The character set includes support for the Queezoid language only.

Please note that the fonts are limited to function with English text and as a result will not recognise accented characters.

Key details

Core Tone Double Tied

The core letter shapes are made in a single stroke.

A tone mark appears above or below the second vowel in a mixed vowel combination.

Several common double letter combinations developed as individual letter shapes. Less common ones however, replace the second letter with a low or high mark denoting the occurrence of the repeat.

Some letter combinations have developed to become distinct shapes.

OpenType features

Sans

[9/29/5]

To allow Queezoid to function as intended, please make sure that Ligatures and Contextual Alternates are turned on.

In addition to the core glyph set, Queezoid Hand includes multiple joined characters. Make sure that Ligatures and Contextual Alternates are turned on.
